

Sue Durward (BA HONS)

I remember always enjoying art at school, and once received a prize when my exam piece was exhibited and won the viewers vote. It was a woodland scene, and that is still my favourite subject to date. I had no further interaction with art until I retired from the Civil Service as shift work and moving around the country made it difficult to attend art groups.

On returning to my home town, I was delighted to find that there was an art group close to home, I found the ALP group very friendly and supportive. It is always interesting to see the wide variety of media, styles and techniques employed and there is always somebody on hand to offer advice if needed. I generally use watercolour and am challenging myself to paint in a looser more spontaneous style.

I have exhibited with ALP in various locations in North Devon from 2015 to the present day.
