

Jenny Crook

I first found my love of painting when I received a box of paints and a colouring book for Christmas when I was quite young. I still remember the joy of having my first box of Reeves paints.

I went to evening classes at North Devon College to learn about the different styles of painting. When I retired, I joined Ian Hudson's group at Newport Church Hall, where I learned about using a minimal number of paints to achieve many different colours.

After a few years break from this group I joined ALP at St Johns Community Hall, which I still attend.

I have enjoyed learning quite a number of new styles and enjoy having the freedom to paint whatever you want. I have exhibited with ALP at North Devon Hospital, Barnstaple Library during the Art Trek event and the ALP Easter exhibition 2022.
